

Use the following children's literature to reinforce the focus phoneme of each Sound Waves unit.

These books should be read aloud to early years students* as they are unlikely to have the word recognition skills required to read the texts independently.

By reading the stories aloud, you will help expand students' vocabulary and background knowledge, which are required for language comprehension. It also familiarises them with different text types, models reading behaviours and establishes reading as an enjoyable activity.

We recommend using these books alongside the Sound Waves Decodable Readers to help early years students develop reading comprehension skills.

The Decodable Readers give students specific opportunities to apply their knowledge of phoneme-grapheme relationships and phonemic awareness, which over time leads to quick and accurate word recognition. See page 5 for more information about the Sound Waves Decodable Readers.

*The books listed are also suitable for upper years students to read independently.

Decodable Readers with a difference

Sound Waves Decodable Readers follow a systematic synthetic phonics sequence and consolidate the explicit teaching of phoneme-grapheme relationships in corresponding Sound Waves Foundation and Year 1 lessons.

The Decodable Readers feature captivating stories and charming illustrations and are available in three levels of difficulty: support, core and extended.
